Carmel Sanitary board race

Valley growth an election issue

By AL EISNER

THREE CANDIDATES are vying for two seats on the board of the Carmel Sanitary District in Tuesday's election. Polls open at 7 a.m. and close at 8 p.m.

Incumbent James B. Pruitt, 64, an architect, has been a member of the board since 1954. Retired Air Force Colonel Vernon L. Head, 60, and Clark W. Struve, a 31-year-old insurance agent, are running for the seat vacated by Don Kirk, who declined to seek reelection after serving a four-year term.

The other three members of the board, elected two years ago, are Ken McGinnis, president; Charlotte Hurst; and Ted Weller.

Elections to the board of the sanitary district, which encompasses all of the city of Carmel and much of the surrounding area, normally do not generate much voter interest, often attracting as little as 25 per cent of the registered voters. An unusual amount of attention has been paid to this election, however, because the district is on the brink of making crucial decisions on the expansion of the sewage treatment plant at the mouth of the Carmel River.

The district also has been told that it must stop discharging effluent into Carmel Bay, which was designated by the state as an area of "special biological significance" in 1975. These two issues, and a controversial study that predicts a 47 per cent growth in population in the district's "study area," were the subject of a public workship that drew an overflow crowd to Carmel High School on Oct. 25.

The controversial population report, prepared by the district's consultants, Sedway-Cooke, predicts steady growth culminating in a 47 per cent increase by 1990. The study, funded by the federal government, is part of an Areawide Facilities Plan that is being drawn to aid in predicting the district's funding needs.

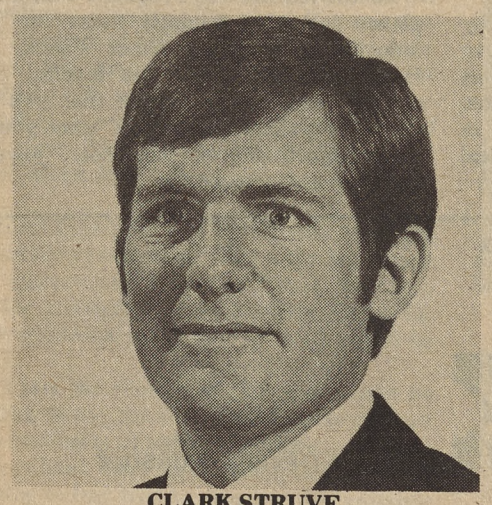
BECAUSE OF the crucial nature of the election, and also because it has not received widespread media coverage, The Pine Cone contacted the candidates to get their views on the above questions. Two of the candidates, Head and Struve, were interviewed. The other candidate, Pruitt, has been out of town for almost two months and had not returned at press time.



CLARK STRUVE

Married, one daughter; president Monterey Peninsula Jaycees; director, Monterey Bay Life Underwriters' Association; board member, Armed Services YMCA; committee member, Monterey Peninsula Bicentennial Committee; past neighborhood commissioner, Carmel Boy Scout Troop 86; sponsor family, American Host Foundation Program. Served as an officer for one year in Vietnam conflict. Degree in risk management and insurance from San Jose State University; attended the American College, Bryn Mawr, Penn. A Chartered Life Underwriter.

IF YOU HAVE a predictable 3-2 environmentalist vote on the board, why bother to meet at all?" says Struve. The reference is to the present composition of the board, which frequently votes 3-2, with Weller and Pruitt a minority in favor of growth with less restraint. Struve sees himself as a kind of "swing" vote, or independent board member who will vote his conscience after examing the facts.

"Don Kirk (the outgoing board member) has provided excellent balance. He looks at the issues fairly. I would like to fill that role," Struve says.

"I do have excellent rapport with everyone on the board. I have visited with every one at length and know that I can work with them," he adds.

SINCE PRUITT was one of the three persons closely associated with the board who, Struve says, urged him to run for the vacant seat, Struve has been identified as someone who would vote much the same way Pruitt has on critical environmental matters.

"If we're both elected," Struve says, "my votes will not be predictable. Jim Pruitt is a good friend of mine, but I will make my own independent decisions.

"I don't have tunnel vision. I am able to think and act after weighing the data and that is what the board needs right now. My votes will neither limit growth nor encourage growth. I'm not against growth. I just don't want it to overtake us.

"We all realize there will be growth in Carmel Valley," Struve says. "I can honestly go down the middle of the road. I think it is our job to listen to the wishes of the majority and to do their bidding."

ON THE QUESTION of growth, Struve says he found the projected 47 per cent population growth figure "startling," and stated flatly: "I wouldn't want to see that. I don't think our roads, water supply and other facilities could stand it.

"The projections are based on facts," he says, "but we don't have to build our plant or make plans to accommodate those percentages."

Of the 20 alternatives for disposal of wastewater discussed at last week's workship, Struve sees agricultural and golf course irrigation as "valid alternatives that are economically feasible. By charging for the water, it provides for some kind of return instead of letting it flow into the bay.

"We should be selling recycled wastewater to the golf courses in Pebble Beach where there is no chance of contamination of the groundwater. This could be a problem if wastewater were used in Carmel Valley."

STRUVE WAS impressed by the size of the turnout at the October public workship, and with the high level of interest shown by the persons participating in it.

"The workshop was great," Struve says. "It was a foundation, a beginning. The overwhelming opinion was to do something else with the wastewater — then let's do it," he adds.

"I took as many notes as possible at the workshop," he says, "to see what the people want. Our elected officials are serving the people, so they have got to listen."

Struve has an innovative idea for soliciting opinions from taxpayers in the area. "When something comes up that could directly affect a major portion of the population of the area, the sanitary district should use a questionnaire sent through the mails for guidance." He believes this would be a worthy use of tax funds.

"I love it here," Struve says, "and want to preserve the wonderful things we have. I'm excited that I might have the chance to serve."

Science teacher leads rare typing class

By JIM BARRETT

"HE'S HILARIOUS. He's outstanding. This man has put such enthusiasm in that class," said Allura Fishburn, librarian at Carmel Middle School.

Her praise was for Albert C. Kolb, 57, who spent 11 years there as a science teacher. When he returned from a two-year sabbatical in 1975, he found the school needed no science teacher, but it did need a typing instructor.

Kolb himself had not learned to type until he was 45. Until he was reassigned, his work on a typewriter was done grudgingly and on a casual basis.

He soon found after school opened in September that his typing difficulties were no different from the seventh and eighth graders he taught.

"Nothing worked. The existing machine is an archaic oxcart. It is designed for failure. You have to be ambidextrous or a left-handed athlete to make one of these go," said Kolb peering down at a worn typewriter.

The scientist in Kolb led him to search out a better idea. He found it. He read of experiments during the Depression by a Seattle professor who rearranged the conventional typewriter keyboard with some intriguing results.

Dr. August Dvorak, a professor at the University of Washington, invented the keyboard in 1932. It placed the five vowels next to each other on the left side. On the standard keyboard, they are scattered. The design was aimed at minimizing finger travel.

By actual measurement, a typist's fingers travel about 29 miles a day. Using the Dvorak keyboard, now dubbed the American Simplified Keyboard, travel was cut to one mile.

Moreover, the work is shifted to the right hand using the ASK keyboard, easing the muscle chores of typing, according to Kolb. "Most people in this country are right-handed, yet we still type on machines where 60 per cent of the work has to be done with the left hand," he said.

FOR BEGINNING TYPISTS, the ASK system is easier to master than the conventional keyboard, he said. To his disappointment, however, only five pupils have received parent permission to use the ASK machine during the past year.

"This is an academic community," Kolb said, resigning himself to the same public reluctance that Dvorak met with his early machines.

Kolb said the ASK machines make typing easier for youngsters, but in class he refrains from the evangelic fervor he displays talking about the system in his off hours.

What Kolb has done to encourage student typing is to give them assignments with meaning, jobs that ordinarily would be performed by wage-earning employees.

In the library, for instance, Kolb's classes type the daily overdue-book list. "There are 80 to 90 books due each day. It used to take me at least 45 minutes a day and I was

Chapel Guild bazaar signals start of the Yule season

THE OFFICIAL SIGNAL that the holidays are just around the corner is the annual Carmel Valley Community Chapel Guild Bazaar. This year it is scheduled for Saturday, Nov. 12, in the Fellowship Hall on Village Drive.

Booths filled with ideas to tempt shoppers to get a head start on gifts and decor will be presented by Mrs. Thomas (Marjorie) McKiernon and her committee. Included will be live plants, unusual and common varieties; dried arrangements; Thanksgiving, Christmas and everyday favorites; and white elephants, a large selection of nearly new gifts.

A Christmas booth will display decorations for the home and tree; nifty thrifty fashions will be upstairs in the thrift shop — a dazzling collection of holiday sweaters, blouses, pant suits and accessories.

There are many treasures to be found in the new gift booth, including an exquisite afghan handmade by Elmira Davis. Marjorie and her committee have priced this special gift at $135.

The bakery booth will have baked goods, jams, jellies and pickles made by mothers of the newly formed Chapel Nursery School, plus many more delicious treats to use now or freeze for the holidays.

Valley neighbors are invited to bring family and friends from other areas to shop from 10 to 4 and to enjoy the luncheon from 11:30 until 2. Florence Johnson and Jean Stekly have planned a menu including glazed chicken, mixed wild rice, cole slaw, Vienna bread, dessert and beverage. No reservations are necessary for the luncheon, and tickets are only $2.75.

Artist Claudia Bibber honored

CARMEL VALLEY ARTIST Claudia Bibber was honored by the Jesters at a preview party of her work Friday evening at the Monterey Peninsula Museum of Art. Her exhibit showed the influences of her new interests, including papermaking, textiles and fibers and their relations to printmaking.

With a graphics studio in the Valley, she also finds time to serve as Assistant Director of Arts and Crafts at Fort Ord.

Claudia received her BFA in art education at Kansas State College, Fort Hayes, and her MFA in printmaking at the University of Minnesota. She did graduate work in etching and later became interested in lithography.

Joe Baker new FFA president

THE CARMEL HIGH SCHOOL Future Farmers of America have elected club officers for the fall term. Serving the Carmel chapter are Joe Baker, president; Kathy Collins, vice president; Ashley Swanson, secretary; Dee Dee Sherman, treasurer; Dan Hogue, sentinel; and Marit Arana, reporter.

The agriculture room at Carmelo is the meeting place for the group, whose advisor is Richard Willard.

Rich Holine engaged to P.B. woman

PLANS FOR a wedding in April were recently disclosed by Capt. (USN ret.) and Mrs. Edward Snopkowski, of Pebble Beach, who announced the engagement of their daughter, Barbara Jean Jessica Snopkowski, to Richard Alan Holine, of Carmel Valley.

The bride-to-be attended Monterey Peninsula College and is a teacher's aide and tennis coach at Carmel High School. She is the sister of Patrice, Vickie, Joan, John and Mark Snopkowski.

Rich, the son of Mrs. Virginia Holine of Carmel Valley and the late Dr. Leif Alan Holine, graduated from Carmel High School and the University of California at Davis. He is the brother of Ruth Holine.

A Young Life leader, Rich is presently associated with the Sierra Instrument company of Carmel Valley. He has been part of the Carmel Unified School District's aquatic program for many years and during the past summer coached the Barracuda swim team.

The couple first announced their wedding plans to the team and their families at a party at Toro Park. The ceremony will take place April 29 in Carmel.

Final bridge party draws many guests

BERNICE LEONI, Connie Service, Susan Lee and Novella Nicholsen were hostesses of the final benefit bridge and canasta party of 1977 for the Carmel Valley Community Chapel Guild.

"Fall Harvest" was the timely party theme, with gourds, Indian corn and pumpkins surrounding heads of lettuce trimmed with nasturtiums.

Table prizes were awarded to Alice Broberg, Nellie Mirani, Muriel Dawson, Bernice Leoni, Ruth Wade, Vera Stokes, Ruth Mullen, Edna Lewis, Vera Bautz and Lucille Ambrogio. Ruth Wade and Ruth Mullen placed high in bridge, with the canasta prizes going to Vera Bautz and Lucille Ambrogio.

With the Guild's Bazaar scheduled for November and schedules filled during December, this was the last card party until January. Nellie Mirani, Guild social chairman, would like to thank all the ladies for their participation and support and invite them to watch for the date of the first party of the new year.

Valleyites feted for service

CITED FOR SERVICE to the American Cancer Society were Valleyites Mrs. John Kvenild, John Crivello, Art Imwalle, Rear Admiral (USN ret.) Lucius Chappell and Dr. Laurence Torin at the annual installation dinner meeting of the Monterey-San Benito chapter of the American Cancer Society. They each accepted the Order of the Golden Sword.

A new slate of officers took over for the 1977-78 year, headed by Vernon Horton of Salinas, who replaced Dr. Gerard Martin of Pacific Grove as president. Serving with Horton will be Dr. George Thorngate IV, vice president; Robert House, Salinas, treasurer; and Peggy Kvenild, Carmel Valley, secretary.

Shermans hear of son's promotion

MR. AND MRS. ROGER SHERMAN of Paso Hondo have received word that their son, Steve, who is stationed at Camp Fatima in Okinawa with the 1st Marine Air Wing, has been promoted to lance corporal. Steve, a Carmel High graduate, is serving as company diarist.

Peninsula volunteers to host fall sale

THE MONTEREY PENINSULA Volunteer Services will host its Annual Fall Sale on Saturday, Nov. 12, 1-4 p.m. in the Exhibition Hall of the Monterey Fairgrounds.

Donations of $1 will benefit the Family Service Agency. A snack bar will be open all day while shoppers visit the various booths or bid on the silent auction items, which include three hours' service from an interior decorator and three electrical appliances.

The door prizes include an oil painting by Freda Fischer, member of the Carmel Art Association; a 20-pound doll and wardrobe; and a hand-crocheted coverlet-size afghan by Dresser.

Booths include The Pregnant Onion, with plants requiring minimal water for both indoors and out; Gourmet Foods; and Handmades, with new and fanciful gifts.

The committee is certain that you will agree "recycling is happiness" when you see their assortment of what-nots, jewelry, clothing and accessories.

Rare typing class

going like thunder," said Mrs. Fishburn, the librarian.

Last school term, another class spent its time sharpening skills by typing letters to 599 overseas government information agencies. They obtained the mailing list from a book and virtually every agency returned to the school color brochures and books about the nations. Mrs. Fishburn filled four file drawers with the booklets.

TRACY HOGAN, 12, like many other of Kolb's students, gets class credit and a grade for doing typing for her teachers. Two weeks ago, for example, she spent three hours retyping a slate of questions dittoed and given to her English course. The questions were required homework as part of biographical reading about Helen Keller.

"I want the kid to feel the work is valuable," Kolb said, pulling at his suspenders. "If it winds up in the trash bin, then it was just junk work."

His combination of typing instruction and the work ethic has brought some mild rewards. Kolb said the work of his students led Carmel Unified School District to give him $1,000 for new typewriters.

Equipment in good repair is necessary for typing instruction, he said. So is a comfortable desk, as he explained.

WHEN KOLB STARTED the typing courses, he found several of the pupils could not touch the floor. "I found a couple of kids who were handy and had them hacksaw some of the legs on the desks. In a few cases, they took off as much as five and a half inches," said Kolb.

All of this science-turned-typing teacher's dedication leads up to one thing. Raising a pen in his hand, Kolb said, "My education goal is to have these machines replace this." He has gone so far as to title the course "Mechanical Writing."

Kolb said he labored long hours writing reports for his master's degree. The work was done in longhand. "I'd have to hire a typist and wait until she had finished. It was wasted time," he declared.

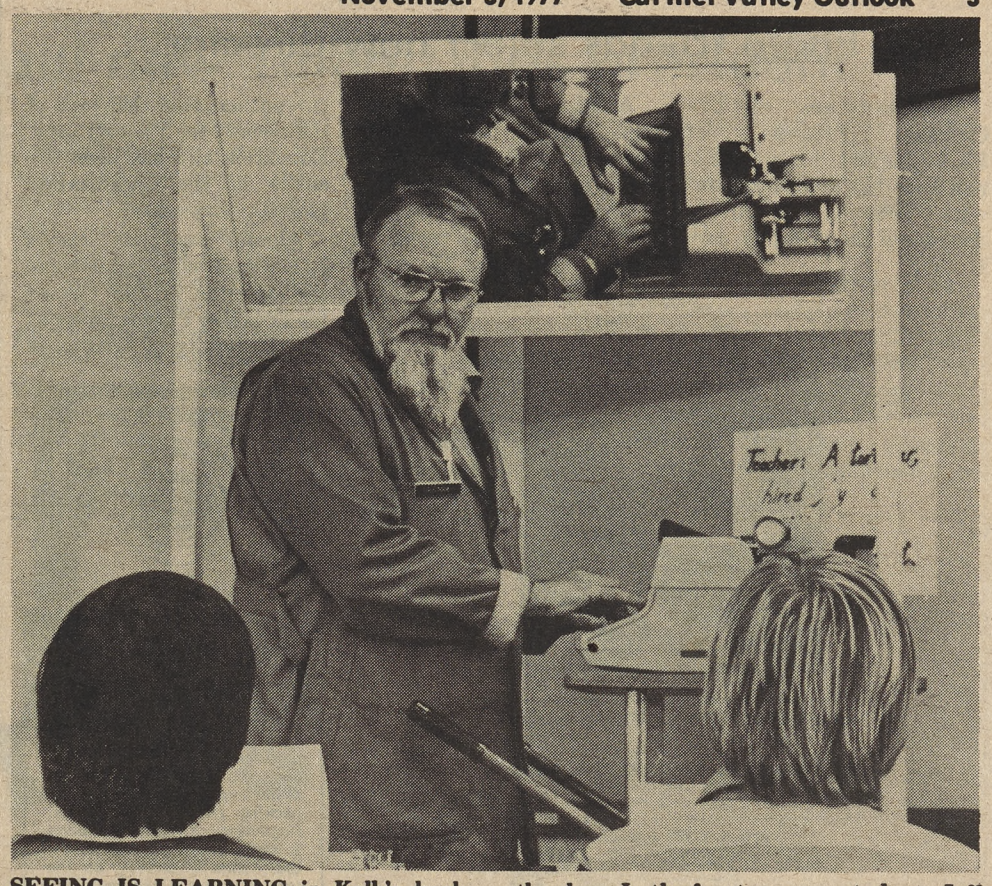
HE PERSONALLY USES the ASK keyboard because it saves him time and labor. Asked if it was practical in the work world, given the fact virtually every office uses the so-called "Qwerty," or standard typewriter, Kolb provided a hard-nosed business answer.

"The carpenter, the mechanic, the plumber takes his own tools to the job and gets a nice tax deduction for it. Why not the typist? There is this business image, however, that women must comply with the equipment the boss provides."



SEEING IS LEARNING in Kolb's book, and he built the adjustable mirror for that purpose. It reflects his hand positioning to the class. In the front row are students Jeff Jayubo and Tim Anger.

Why is the simplified keyboard superior? Kolb reached for his grade book and translated the small pencil marks and red checks into the bottom line:

"I have had students, just beginners, use the ASK system and within nine days they can type 16 correct words per minute for five consecutive minutes," he said.

"The rest are on the standard keyboard. The most I can expect is 15 to 20 words, but that takes at least seven weeks."

Sanitary board candidates talk

Retired Air Force colonel; former executive director, Odello Land Acquisition Fund; member, executive committee, Carmel Meadows Association; active restoring several older homes in Peninsula; elementary and secondary teaching credentials from San Jose State University; aircraft pilot for four years in three different wars.

"THE CARMEL SANITARY District should buy the eastern half of the Odello artichoke ranch (at the mouth of the Carmel River and Highway 1) and use it for land disposal of effluent," declares Vernon Head.

"We need to do something with the water says. "We were given three years to accomplish this by the state of California. Two years have already gone by, so we have only one year left to comply with the mandate."

Head is familiar with the situation regarding the Odello property. He served as executive director of Odello Land Acquisition Fund (OLAF) six years ago. OLAF was successful in raising funds, matched by the state, which led to the purchase of the western 155 acres of the artichoke ranch.

"OLAF saved the west side," Head continues, "but the east side is up for grabs." A plan for the development of the eastern acreage is presently before the Monterey County Planning Commission.

"Disposal of effluent in lakes might even have the additional beneficial effect of heading off salt water intrusion by percolating into the aquifer at the headway of the river. This is presently being done at Half Moon Bay," Head points out.

SHOULD THE DISTRICT look seriously at tertiary treatment? This is the final stage of wastewater treatment that produces water virtually free of bacteria. Costs for this additional stage of treatment would be high.

"I feel the citizens of this area would be willing to pay the additional costs to explore the feasibility of tertiary treatment, or even to buy land. They have shown that they are willing to buy land to preserve and enhance the area," he says, a reference to the formation of a regional park district five years ago.

Head applauds the effort of the sanitary district in attracting citizen participation at last week's workshop. "I have no basis to quarrel with the projection of a 47 per cent increase in population by 1990," Head says, "but I feel we have to be very careful about the rate of development. I fully concur with the efforts of the Carmel Valley Property Owners Association to control growth in Carmel Valley. People should be mindful that our economy will suffer if the beauty of the area is altered, because one depends on the other." The tourist business would suffer if the environment of the Peninsula were seriously 'egraded, he explains.

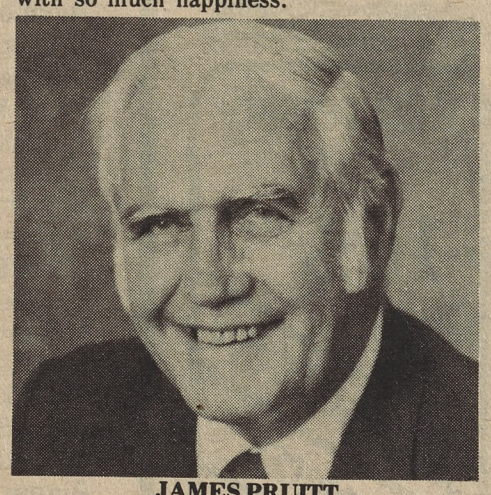
"It's up to the people to decide," Head adds. "Do we want to continue to develop the area and take chance on ruining it, or hold back and have a jewel of a place?"

Head recalls that he was a frequent visitor to Carmel as long as 30 years ago. "I always left feeling healed. The atmosphere is still here, but the people must work to preserve it," he says.

Head stated flatly that he would "favor and work for a vote of the people before there is any further plant expansion that would increase capacity."

He says he is running for the post because "people must get involved and take part in the process . . . we mustn't adopt the 'Let's let George do it' attitude.

"I hope to contribute to the solution of our problems because of the debt I owe to the community, which has provided me with so much happiness."



JAMES PRUITT

Architect; director, Carmel Sanitary District since 1954; member, Carmel Advisory Board of the Monterey County Planning Commission since 1957; member, Carmel Cultural Commission from 1957 to 1975; member, American Arbitration Board since 1967. Degree from architectural department, Pennsylvania State University in 1936. Officer, U.S. Navy from 1942 to 1954.

PRUITT WAS NOT available for a preelection interview. Reprinted here is a prepared statement about the incumbent candidate.

"I have been a director of the Carmel Sanitary District since 1954. The years of my service were intensively busy years of study and decisions that culminated in the building of our excellent treatment plant. During my tenure as director, I was instrumental in providing excellent and efficient service to the residents and taxpayers of the district with minimum cost. During my incumbency, I was involved with the development of the district master plan to the year 2000. The master plan included, in addition to the present areas within the district, the Carmel Highlands, Carmel Valley and Pebble Beach areas. Presently, I am active in the study of Carmel Bay as an area of special biological significance.

"I am an architect by profession, a graduate of the Pennsylavania State University School of Architecture, and a member of the American Institute of Architects.

"My association with the Carmel area dates back to 1945. I have been active in community affairs. I served on the Carmel Advisory Board of the Monterey County Planning Commission since 1957, and on the Carmel Cultural Commission from 1957 to 1975. I feel that my years of experience as a director, my background as a businessman experienced in budgeting and cost accounting, and my knowledge and love of the Carmel area will be a great asset to me if I am reelected."

The trustees of the Carmel Friends of Photography have announced that James Alinder will become executive director of the group on Jan. 1.

Alinder comes to Carmel from Lincoln, Neb., where he was head of the Art Department photography program at the University of Nebraska. He had been in the post since 1968. He is the current national chairman of the Society for Photographic Education and has been the editor of the organization journal, Exposure,

HALLOWEEN'S SPIRIT hangs on with the Carmel High School student production of "Count Dracula," which opens tonight on campus. Bob Dunn plays the vampire and Alana Bernardi plays Mina, whom he stalks by night. Tickets to the debut and the repeat performances Friday and Saturday are $1.75, or $1 for students. The play will be repeated Nov. 10, 11 and 12. Curtain time is 8 p.m. for all shows. They will be staged in the Pawnshop Theater on campus.

Author's party at Thunderbird

Beatrice Lydecker, author of What the Animals Tell Me, will present a lecture and autograph copies of her book, Saturday, Nov. 5, 3-5 p.m. at the Thunderbird Bookshop in the Barnyard, Highway 1 and Rio Rd., Carmel. Admission is $2.

Miss Lydecker is an animal psychologist who says that communication with animals is a native ability that everyone possesses. What the Animals Tell Me is her story of how she learned to communicate telepathically with animals and how she diagnoses their illnesses and problems on the basis of telepathic messages.

The book is published by Harper & Row and sells for $6.95.

Autograph parties are planned at the Thunderbird for several other authors, including Dorothy Dewdell, who will sign copies of Tahoe, an original paperback published by Playboy Press, Sunday, Nov. 6, noon-2 p.m.; Peg Bracken, who will autograph copies of the I Hate to Cook Almanack, Nov. 26; Jim Enyeart, who will autograph copies of Bruguiere: His Photographs and His Life, Nov. 27; and Henry Evans, who will autograph copies of Botanical Prints, Dec. 4.

Gene Faul new Talbott Ties president

"I'm home again," said Gene E. Faul, named the president of Robert Talbott Ties on Tuesday.

Faul, 47, was raised in Carmel where his family operated the Bib 'n' Tucker Children's Store. He and his wife, Karen, are co-owners of Jag of Carmel, a women's apparel store.

Speaking for himself and his wife, Robert Talbott, chairman of the tie company, said, "It has long been Audrey's and my desire to keep and continue this company as a family company and to make the necessary plans to assure the continuation of an effort that has taken over a quarter of a century to build. Audrey and I feel strongly that we have built something rather special which should be preserved."

Faul resigned in July as president of Cole of California, a leading swimwear maker. He had held the position since 1974. Before joining Cole, Faul was executive vice-president of Catalina Co., also a swimwear apparel firm.

The executive graduated from the University of Santa Clara in 1952, spent two years in the U.S. Army and managed his family's clothing store in Carmel for three years before joining Catalina Co., in 1958. He was promoted to executive vice-president at Catalina in 1972.

Talbott neckwear is sold at two company stores on Ocean Avenue and through sales representatives nationwide. Robert and Audrey Talbott started the firm themselves, stitching the bowties fashionable in the early '50s.

Mid-Valley Nursery goes apple pickin'

The moms packed up the tots from Mid-Valley Parent Cooperative Nursery School and took them apple picking on the farm of Charles Dawson in mid-October.

By the end, the pint-sized pickers had packed away 44 pounds which will become apple sauce for nursery school snacks. A few apples were saved, dipped in caramel and sold at the school carnival Friday.

The class of three and four year olds is one of three cooperatives organized under the adult education program in Carmel Unified School District.

Keeping horses is a fascinating hobby. It's fun; it's something legal we can do for kicks.

But a kicking horse is no fun. It can hobble your hobby. You can't take a kicker out in company. No horse shows. No trail rides. No beach blanket bingo.

You can't even fob off the bad horse on the kids, since some horses will kick only when they sense an inexperienced horseman who will not be able to stop them.

There are two kinds of kickers: horses who kick other horses and horses who kick humans. We have never met a horse who let fly at both kinds of targets. It's an either-or situation. In fact, some of the worst horse-kickers are the most protective of timid humans and little children.

Horses who kick other horses are frequently mares. Kicking is a mare's natural way of establishing her social position in the horse herd. Flocks of chickens have a pecking order. A herd of horses — in the wild, this would be a herd of mares with one stallion over them — have a kicking order. Stallions, and their manmade counterpart, geldings, assert themselves by biting.

Curing a horse who is aggressive toward other horses is difficult, since it is an instinctive behavior pattern. The horse may have to be stabled in his own stall or pipe corral and never turned out with the group.

It is possible, however, to cure his urge to kick at his companions while being ridden. Riding is not a natural activity. The whole thing about horse training is that the horse should lay aside his instinctive behavior and be obedient to a human for a period of time.

Horses that kick (or bite) when ridden in pairs have not been trained to be ridden close to another horse.

A good cure is to choose two horses that are neither bad tempered nor timid; assertive geldings would be a good choice. Ride the kicker between the other two in close order. Work all the gaits and boot him right along. A few brisk workouts at the sitting trot, the strong trot and the canter will take the kicker's mind right off his problems. He is not likely to try kicking at one horse in such close company where he could be the middleman in a melee.

Later, when riding in a group situation, try to keep the (former) kicker slightly behind and beside another horse. Keeping him the length of his head to the rear cools his heels and puts him in the most disadvantageous situation (in his own mind) for asserting himself.

When mounted on a horse who shows signs of wanting to kick, i.e., ears tight back, cocked leg, backing toward another horse, jerk his head UP by both reins and smack him hard behind the girth. Smack him with both legs and a crop if at all possible. Do it fast and be prepared for the sudden leap forward as the kicker changes his mind about what he wants to do. A dressage rider would say the horse traded backward impulsion for forward impulsion!

"There must be more to life than this."

Kids should be taught how to treat horses that want to put on a kicking match. They should immediately turn the horses and put their heads together. A small child is not strong enough to ride a kicker away from the boxing ring during the bout. Riding away just puts the kickers in the best position to continue kicking; the horses will even back quite long distances to do so.

Horses that kick humans start their bad habits out of fear. And like any coward who gets a kick out of victimizing another person, they keep it up because they have enjoyed success.

Never allow a human kicker success in his chosen profession. Be on your guard. Don't walk softly but whistle or talk so the horse is aware of your presence and your position. Carry a big stick.

It is standard practice most places to teach a horse to turn and face you when you enter his stall or corral. He learns this very readily if you carry a small switch for a few days. Swat any behinds you see. In a day or so you will no longer have to look at any horse's behind. He will hide it behind him when he sees you coming.

It's rather an American idiosyncrasy to teach the horse not only to face you but to go and stand in the corner facing you as you work around the corral or stall. This stops the horse from making a nuisance of himself during stall cleaning or when carrying feed to the manger. It is taught in exactly the same manner, with a small switch. Soon the switch can be left behind. Just point your finger at the horse and he will promptly go into the corner and turn to face you.

Horses learn this sort of thing so readily because they do not resent it. It becomes part of the daily routine like eating or grooming. Schoolchildren line up at the classroom door when the bell rings. Horses go stand in the corner when pointed at, where they would never, never dream of kicking their human. They have no complaints and no kicks coming.

D. Kaye Chandler, President and Project Director of Carmel Valley Ranch Company has announced that effective November 1, 1977, Samuel F.B. Morse III was appointed Vice President in charge of Construction. Mr. Morse received his Bachelor's degree in Architecture from Cal. Poly, and has been a self-employed General Contractor on the Peninsula for the last seven years.

Mr. Chandler also wishes to announce that Miss Kim Baker who resides in Carmel Valley has been appointed Secretary/Treasurer.

Dog bite victim asks help

Carmel police are searching for the owner of a tan Labrador that bit a woman Monday in the parking lot of Wells Fargo Bank in Carmel.

The victim, Ceanne Fellows, 23, of Carmel, was bitten on the right palm. She was walking between a parked car and a white pickup truck with two dogs, a Labrador and an Irish setter, in it. The Labrador lunged at her and bit her, she said.

The owner of the dogs reportedly gave the victim a false name and address. She said she was unable to locate any "Bill Jackson" at an address on "Stoney Court" in Carmel.

Ms. Fellows was treated Monday by a private physician. She has asked for help locating the owner of the dogs.

He was described as a man in his mid-20s, 5-10, with dark curly hair about medium length.

If the dog cannot be located, Ms. Fellows must undergo antirabies treatment. The treatment involves a series of injections over 10 days. Dogs that bite usually are quarantined by authorities to determine if they have rabies.
